

Osmeña: Inclusion in AMLA won't hurt real estate industry

By Marvin Bautista

SEN. Sergio Osmeña has de-bunked the inclusion of real estate transactions in the list of activities that need to be reported to the Anti-Money Laundering Council if they involve an average cash payment of P25,000 or P100,000.

Osmeña, author of Senate Bill No. 3221 that transfers the matter of control, custody and administration of real estate to the Anti-Money Laundering Act (AMLA), dismissed criticism that the proposal, if enacted, would dampen the real estate industry in the country.

Osmeña said some of his colleagues had expressed concern over the inclusion of real estate transactions in the list of covered activities.

"They'll say in Cebu, Davao, in Zamboanga...all over. They'll say in two years, they'll say, 'it's already legal,'" he said.

Osmeña said this was why in many countries, real estate dealers were covered by reporting requirements under anti-money laundering legislation.

Aside from real estate agents, also proposed to be covered by the reporting requirements are casinos, those providing lodging in previous months and rooms, and those managing investment funds, among others.

The Philippines was the first Asian country to enact the law. The Philippines was the first Asian country to enact the law.

NPA roasts 10,000 chickens

AN ESTIMATED 10,000 chickens were roasted alive on Friday after alleged communist group leaders cooked the poultry feast of a businessman who had refused to pay ransom money to Zamboanga del Sur.

The military said in a statement yesterday the attack was carried out by the New People's Army (NPA) under the leadership of the Communist Party of the Philippines (CPP).

The incident took place at 12:30 a.m. in Zamboanga del Sur, according to Capt. Alfonso Cordero, spokesman for the Army's 1st Infantry Division.

Cordero said up to 10,000 chickens were roasted in two large buildings. Damage was placed at P3.5 million to P4 million.

A witness said seven armed men, including a woman, entered the compound at midnight, killed the workers and confiscated their cell phones.

Some of the armed men posed questions which they thought were related to the NPA.

Cordero said the attack had been planned for some time but he did not know the details.

TALK of the TOWN

Protect young, poor from smoking

By Sen. Alan Peter Goya
Luzon

THERE are no remaining headlines, but the young and the poor, who smoke and drink excessively are dying every day.

Two Filipinos die from tobacco use every hour, resulting in 200 deaths every day and 67,000 deaths every year. This is a tragedy.

How did this crisis happen? The main reason is low prices of cigarettes and alcohol. The Philippines has one of the lowest prices of the two products in the world.

Because cigarettes are so cheap, the Philippines has one of the highest smoking rates in the Pacific Rim. A 2007 survey showed that 23.5 percent of 14,400 men smoke. It is estimated that more 17.2 million Filipinos who are 15 years old smoke at smoking.

To discourage Filipinos from smoking, we have to raise taxes. Raise the price of cigarettes and alcohol, and fewer people will buy them.

You cannot argue with the facts. Raise the price of tobacco. By 70 percent and you prevent a quarter of all smoking-related deaths and injuries.

Both reduced per smoker, but it is the poor who get sick more often. That's because the poorest smoke spends more, inhaling more toxic substances, including tar.

Right to health

The Constitution is devoted to the use of cigarettes and alcohol. If a Filipino citizen wants to smoke and drink, he or she has the right to do so. But the state has the right to regulate the use of smoking and drinking alcohol, they say.

But unlike ordinary citizens, Filipinos who are smokers of cigarettes are not free to ignore the present dangers of tobacco.

Cigarette smoke contains more than 70 chemicals which cause cancer. Deaths from alcohol and heart attack are also common.

Philippine students in a public high school in Manila learn about tobacco use during a lesson.

In its opinion, the Commission on Good Governance is a discredited body, and its findings are not to be taken into account. The Commission is a discredited body, and its findings are not to be taken into account.

In addition, the Philippines is bound by a treaty called the Framework Convention on Tobacco Control, sponsored by the World Health Organization (WHO). I sponsored the Senate ratification of this treaty in 2003.

Therefore, it is clear that under the Constitution, Congress has a duty to raise taxes on cigarettes and alcohol. But to raise the tax rates to the level of the tobacco and alcohol industry will push out a business.

This is how the tobacco and alcohol industry has stayed in business. Under the 2004 tax law, tobacco and alcohol products were exempt from the 12 percent excise tax.

Remember that "taxes" means to remove. Excise taxes are meant to eventually remove the use of cigarettes and alcohol because they kill consumers.

Those never-ending, unlimited phone calls

The time for change is now: The Inter-Agency Working Group for Veterans

AS THE UNITED States gave a final decision on the Vietnam War, the American community involved was not the same. The White House was going to honor Filipino War Veterans (Vets). The new law was signed by President Obama. The Inter-Agency Working Group was created on Dec. 17, 2012, to address the issue of Filipino veterans denied recognition. How will this new development impact the thousands of veterans who were rejected during their claims?

who granted recognition of the extraordinary contributions made by the Filipino Veterans. From 2009 to the present, 16,000 claims were approved but there were several thousand that were denied.

P-Noy to welcome solon with PH ties

President Aquino will receive on Monday US Sen. Richard Lugar who is a member of the Asia-Pacific region to discuss support for the nuclear threat reduction program.

Lugar, who was in Manila last Sunday for a three-day visit, is scheduled to meet with Mr. Aquino in Malacañang Palace, as well as with Foreign Secretary Albert del Rosario and other government officials.

"The advisory relayed to us is that Mr. Aquino will be received by the President," Undersecretary of State for Policy and Public Affairs, and other government officials.

The US Embassy said the Philippines was one of the stops in Lugar's tour that is meant to "strengthen the relationship" of the Senate Lugar Global Commission. The commission is focused on reducing the stockpiles of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, reducing materials and delivery systems to enhance the world to address the proliferation threat.

In the embassy statement, Lugar said that cooperation was crucial in identifying and neutralizing the flow of weapons of mass destruction through Southeast Asia, which he said was a major in creation of global trade and commerce by way of air.

The last senior Republican in the US House, Lugar led efforts "at reducing the threat of nuclear weapons around the world and decreasing US dependence on foreign sources of oil," the embassy said.

In June for Mr. Aquino's visit to the United States last June, the US House passed Resolution No. 481 calling for increased defense and security cooperation with the Philippines. The measure was sponsored by Lugar in consultation with the US House of Representatives, the Mutual Defense Treaty between the two countries.

Lugar, now 80, also played a key role in the Philippines' transition to democracy in 1986.

He had led the delegation of international observers that monitored and subsequently denounced the blood-soaked snap election between then-President Ferdinand Marcos and Corason Aquino, the President's mother, in February 1986.

Lugar, although a Republican, ended up politically disagreeing with just one and then US President Barack Obama, who had initially said that job opportunities had increased on both sides. With support from American Army

Binay seeks Israeli deals

Vice President Arroyo Binay has called on Israeli government officials to explore new trade and investment opportunities in the Philippines.

The Vice President, who is to travel on an official visit, also said the Philippines could learn from Israeli technology and experience in agricultural, marine and food production.

Binay also pushed for the entry of Philippine groups and companies into the Israeli market.

"I am happy to note that Filipino agricultural workers are being exposed to Israeli agricultural technology that is considered among the best in the world. Despite the more Philippine trade products such as pineapples and coconuts would find their way into the mainstream Israeli retail markets. The embassy has initiated the mechanism for the approval of pineapple importation to Israel in coordination with the Israeli Ministry of Agriculture," he said in a statement.

Binay earlier paid a courtesy call on the Israeli head of state, President Shimon Peres, at his official residence, Beit Weizman, in Tel Aviv.

The Vice President also discussed regional developments with Israeli Foreign Minister and Deputy Prime Minister Avigdor Lieberman. He also met with Israeli business groups to encourage the overall Philippine-Israel trade relations.

PREPARATION work is ongoing on the site of a power coal plant in Benguet's Tull District, Davao City. The project, by Abbot Power, has been met with protests by local officials and environmental groups.

WAR ON COAL

When dugongs, rivers go to court

By Geraldine Lacorte
Davao City

AFTER comments opposed to coal-fired power plants in Mindanao failed to crack the momentum of their leaders, expert dugongs, even rivers and waterbodies, are the cause in court to stop these projects.

"It's not only the people, it's the Suberfilla, who can sue us," said Justice Sison, spokesperson of the national court group. He said, "The court group has been established to protect the environment and the people's right to a healthy environment."

"Under our environmental law, every Mother Nature can sue," he said, "The court group has been established to protect the environment and the people's right to a healthy environment."

In Manila, he said, "The court group has been established to protect the environment and the people's right to a healthy environment."

A national network of environmentalists called the Anti-ONG has been formed to push for "clean, renewable energy sources, to reduce all legal issues in stop coal-fired plants from being built," said Sison, who initiated a lawsuit against the coal-fired plants in the country. The lawsuit is the first of its kind, and it is being filed in court.

'Stocking' number

Justice Sison, who is the national court group's spokesperson, said, "The court group has been established to protect the environment and the people's right to a healthy environment."

PROTESTERS were seen in a rally against the Benguet coal plant being built, with protesters from officials of Davao City and groups campaigning against the use of coal for power generation.

proposed 10 existing coal-fired power plants in the country. The Department of Energy (DOE) under President Aquino approved 12 projects in the last two years alone, a number that is unprecedented, Sison said, "Mindanao."

"This is the reason because the Philippines is currently relying on the coal to meet its energy needs, and the coal is still being used to generate electricity," he said.

Campaign priority

Of the 10, Sison said, "The court group has been established to protect the environment and the people's right to a healthy environment."

A BATAK community in Benguet supports the against the coal plant in the island.

The six projects are expected to generate a combined capacity of 1,310 megawatts. These included the 300-MW project of the Abbot Power Thermal Plant in Benguet, Tull District, Davao City; the 150-MW expansion of Benguet (also partly Abbot-owned) plant in the Benguet-Villamor, Benguet; the 200-MW plant of Coal Holdings in Benguet; the 300-MW plant of the Miquel Corp. in General Santos City; the 300-MW plant of Benguet in Marikina, Marikina City; the 100-MW plant of Benguet in Marikina, Marikina City; and the 100-MW plant of Benguet in Marikina, Marikina City.

"Taking legal action to end the coal regime in Mindanao is a clear message that our country is willing to fight for its rights," Sison said.

Renewable energy

Coal and renewable energy is abundant in Mindanao, Sison said, but the DOE itself is blocking the implementation of the Renewable Energy Law.

New investments in coal will lock the Philippines into debt and polluting fossil fuel for the next four decades and will prevent the country from tapping its full renewable energy potential, Sison said, "Switching to renewable energy is the only way to ensure that we have a clean, sustainable future for our country."

Environmentalists say that the Benguet Coal plant, located in the Benguet region, is an important source of groundwater, will further be strained if the 300-MW Abbot plant will start coming in Tull.

However, the Coal plant in Benguet, Benguet, promises with the dedicated nature conservation area where the Benguet community is living, according to Sison.

"We have tried all possible means to stop the coal plant, but we have failed," Sison said. "We are now ready to sue the coal plant," he said.

THE ADVERTISING industry is changing.

While some businesses were hesitant to change roles played before, that is what's changing today. You have to lead, get involved and be involved to go new direction.

One observer says the industry is something that "hasn't change under your nose if you find out what's happening in the shadows," he says. He is right, as even the agency pretty girl is not without secrets.

"I've seen protect the industry to one well," says Arnold Lim, Chairman and CEO of South Triangle, one of the country's most agencies.

Each PCN's strategy hinges largely on the longevity of clients in its roster, and with Lim at the helm, you can be sure that it's going to be a solid one.

Going to one of the few agencies of all agency practices will arrive involved in making the show even if many of his clients have been agency presidents, managing directors, chief executives, who would of thought the show completely.

He is still in his fighting stance in the advertising ring, and in this day, he's not just the power change, giving equity and the treatment of all agencies to other agencies.

He's one who's fought tooth-and-nail against copyright infringement, is very vocal about patent holders and is ready to take on the very well.

"I know 70 who have money to spend in the industry," says a creative director whose personal and agency work have been ripped off, revealed and used by other agencies.

In an industry that has seen many so-called ad profits that resulted in nothing and more financial stress, money ended up more like fighting.

Going to heaven next.

"After a few weeks or months, you can be sure your ideas will be stolen, ripped and recycled by others," Lim says without being apologetic.

Lim is wary about an industry that doesn't go after idea creators. "I've always told my agency people to protect our ideas, creativity and integrity," he says.

"I wish we have a stronger body that'll protect the very same industry we've built for many long years," Lim says with a sigh.

Under International law, copyright protection is automatic. "We copyright our materials and make our staff know that we take copyright infringement seriously," he adds.

Lim's agency is also careful about naming after new business pitches. Knowing what he's coming from, you'll understand.

The University of the Philippines embarks on a large-scale ICT project.

As the national university, the University of the Philippines has the duty to uphold and extend its position as the center of leading universities in the world. The University strives forward in pursuit of excellence. Its ambitious eUP Project is a 3-year initiative meant to complement critical day-to-day activities of the University with advanced ICT (Information and Communications Technology) systems and infrastructure for maximum operational efficiency.

The eUP project aims for operation of excellence in support of academic excellence. Existing operations made even more efficient will maximize the use of previous time and available resources of the University. Instead of untangling operational knots, the University can focus on what it does best: to inspire groundbreaking research, participate in global academic discourse, and serve the Filipino people.

eUP's goal is to "integrate, interconnect, and harmonize Information and Communications Technology (ICT) systems and infrastructure across all constituent universities (UUs), thus virtually linking our campuses spread out in the country." The eUP Project was designed to help fulfill UP's overall strategic goal: to be a great university, taking a leadership role in the development of a globally competitive Philippines.

Five core information systems designed to enhance the University's most critical processes are to be deployed through the eUP Project. The Student Academic Information System (SAIS) manages student, faculty, and alumni information. The Human Resources Information System (HRIS) enhances HR processes such as management of employee profiles, attendance, benefits, and reports generation. The Financial Management Information System (FMIS) consolidates all financial information used by the accounting, budget, and cash offices, among others. The Supplies, Procurement, and Campus Management Information System (SPCMIS) manages processes related to procurement and inventory control. Last but not least, the Executive Information System (EIS) delivers real-time, accurate information to University administrators. These integrated and synergized systems transmit and receive information among themselves and are accessible in every campus through the Internet.

"Contributing to nation building" ePLDT is one of the many partner organizations assisting UP in this endeavor. A subsidiary of PLDT, Inc., ePLDT will provide key services to the University such as project management, systems integration, connectivity, and server hosting.

During the ceremonial contract signing to formalize the partnership between UP and its connectivity partner, University of the Philippines President Alfredo E. Pascual said, "UP is a university that shapes minds that shape the nation. Now, both the national university and the nation itself have begun moving forward into the Information Age. Our flagship project, eUP, will bring technological solutions that will help us address ICT challenges in UP—it will help us promote administrative efficiency and academic excellence. The ICT system we will incorporate into existing UP infrastructure will help boost our capabilities, promote public service and vital research, as well as promote IT competencies in academics."

Also present during the ceremonial contract signing were University of the Philippines Vice President for Development Elina A. Zamora, and PLDT Group Officers.

The signed contract between PLDT subsidiary, ePLDT, and UP strengthens UP's far-reaching strategic initiatives. With eUP, the University of the Philippines envisions the delivery of high quality education in a more effective and efficient manner.

Record-breaking Ventura not complacent at all

His painting fetched the highest amount ever paid for a contemporary Asian artist at Sotheby's, but he isn't relaxing—and is preparing for two simultaneous shows

By Ronald L. Chen-Rao

UNTIL, somebody told us the record-breaking bid to an auction for the work of a contemporary Asian artist, Ronald Ventura might always be known for his large-scale work "Greyhound." The 39-year-old artist has been painting and creating for many years now but the Sotheby's Modern and Contemporary Southeast Asian Paintings auction in Hong Kong in April 2012 proved to be an eye-opener.

She still loves him, and wants him back

But it's too late for her to turn back on him and then come out of the closet

By David Karger

For the past few years, the most interesting thing about the life of the actress is her relationship with her ex-boyfriend, the actor. The two have been together since they were in high school, and their relationship has been a source of speculation for years. In 2005, they announced their engagement, and in 2006, they got married. But in 2007, they announced their separation, and in 2008, they announced their divorce. The couple's relationship has been a source of speculation for years, and it's no surprise that they are still in the news.

Thousands attend fiesta Mass of San Padre Pio in Sto. Tomas, Batangas

LPGA's winning Korean Arguelles made her history as the first of the Asian of 14. Padre Pio Shrine in San. Thomas, Pangasinan, will be held in good and prayer for us.

AT LEAST 10,000 people attended the blessing of the altar and the adoration chapel of the Shrine of St. Padre Pio in Sanitary San Pedro, in San, Tama, Sanag, at Sept. 23, feast of the Transfiguration, said Fr. Juan Gueda.

Lips, Archbishop Raimon, Reginald, blessed the shrine and officiated the Mass celebrated by several other priests.

The shrine has grown from a small chapel to a station with the altar bearing a huge crucifix and below it a painting of San Blas the 1st. Aug. 21st.

Fr. Incorporated: "The day began earlier in the Shrine. First Mass at 5 a.m. was said by Fr. Freeman S.C. It started with few people, but the Mass ended with over 1,000 people present."

²At the 7 a.m. Mass and by 9:30 a.m. Mass, all seats were taken. (We had prepared 8,000 chairs.) By 10:00 a.m. the Masses

PURELY PERSONAL

Discussion

By the time Archdiocese delegates returned the Mass, the congregation had grown to over 18,000, and traffic outside was at a standstill. "People were walking as far as 2 1/2 hours when they parked to go to the Mass," said Fr. Jop.

Fr. Jayson Sapien said the Masses, resumed at 7 p.m., in which 5,000 people attended. When the Mass was held on previous night in honor of Fr. Pio, "and Fr. Sapien, 700 p.m., St. Vincent's Church led the celebration of the Holy Eucharist with all priests joining him. The Mass was gradually attended by 8,000 people with no empty chairs and most people standing."

When the Mass, we had the healing, the blessing of relics and anointing of people with special oil by the priests and some present. To the anointing of oil, Paul Clinton oil, but also oil blessed by St. Padre Pio, who said Holy Water's were used. It was an amazing day. Bless with God's miracle through St. Padre Pio's intercession."

Abstract

Further newspaper reporter Jorge Cruz and X. Pedro Piu miraculously succeeded in the healing of his wife, Gina Cruz.

Chia said he brought his wife to St. Luke's Medical Center at 71 years, on Oct. 3, 2011, because she was complaining of a severe headache and high blood pressure. She was 78 years old.

Upon reaching the emergency room, she was given a shot of pain relievers, but she developed a urticaria rash, her temperature had

"That was the last time we saw her awake and in the next 20 days she was comatose at the Veterans ICU with all the gadgets and respirators attached to her pale and bloated body," said Criss.

Before, the poor dog Chris himself was at an advanced stage of a heart problem. She was operated, but still she remained in a coma.

"In the next two days another brain operation was done to install a tube to her lungs going to her stomach, so that the water could be separated from the blood, but still she remained unconscious and that way the time we spent given a 30 percent survival and 60 percent recovery."

Once said "the most modern medical techniques" and "the joint efforts of 10 specialists" failed to revive his wife, she was later transferred after a month to a regular New's room with only a 20 percent chance of survival and less chance of recovery.

Praying to St. Padre Pio

On the morning of Nov. 1, 2011, Cruz's son and his wife went to the National Center of St. Padre Pio in Lima, Queens City and prayed to Padre Pio for him to intercede so that there would another rescue.

"At 3 p.m. that day, a miracle happened in the presence of her grandchildren," said Cruz. "She opened her eyes after 29 days (of unconscious). It was, indeed, a gift from Father God for me with this birthday."

The factory called her last a stroke later in 70-year-old patient with ruptured aneurysm had survived before.

"Today my wife sat out on her own, walked and read," Gray said. "Last week, the two specialist eye doctors were surprised that she had never developed any pathology of her eye with all the strain in her eyes all month."

"What more can we ask of Father than to give us a gift we can never forget, until our last breath. Wondrous indeed ye, Father His, Son who does humble?"

'Living La Vida Imelda' to be staged at National Theater Festival

THE 2010 National Theater Festival (NTF) at the Cultural Center of the Philippines (CCP), which will run from Nov. 9-18, will feature 16 theater groups from across the country.

One to stream-line those viewers is "Living La Vida Imelda," the semi-annual play celebrating your guide Imelda Marcos, which is loosely based on her famous role of her maternal grandmother from July's buildings. The play has been featured in a theater performance, first staged at Silver Line gallery, and dubbed "Imelda's tale of history, gossip and controversy." By the way, the play is directed by Cal's dramatic promoter.

The NTF will also be your best choice to watch the two classic Manila Opera's featured last week, "Imelda," as well as the CCP's "Imelda at CCP," Peter's "Imelda," "Imelda" by the National Theater Festival, and "Imelda," a musical based on a book, semi-annual legend, among other shows. Peque makes docu on Botong

By Rapin San Diego

IT MUST have been hard that those two artists should cross paths at some point.

Peque Gallaga—acclaimed filmmaker behind 1990s classics "Ono, Pata, Mita," "Night Fever" and "Sempin Night"—was commissioned by the Ayala Foundation Inc. to make a documentary on the late National Artist, painter Carlos "Botong" Francisco.

It was surreal, says Gallaga, like Francisco, Gallaga had his root in the film industry as a production designer.

Francisco designed the company he founded like Manuel Conde's "Gongbi Bito," "Totoy de Laya," and the "Yankee" series.

These spots, considerably left an indelible mark on Gallaga as a child growing up in Calcutta, India, in the 1950s.

As for

"A lot of, I used to think like a moviehouse when the Manila Zoo and watch all those costume swashbuckler movies," Gallaga recalled.

When the renowned "Gongbi Bito" won its first award, presented in the SM Mall of Asia recently, Gallaga and Love Reyes, the Botong doc's first producer, made sure to grace the occasion.

Beyond serving as consultant in the digital restoration of "Ono, Pata, Mita" and directing his 2004 comeback, "Indagong" (with Richard Gomez, Sarah Lallari and Adam Rodriguez), Gallaga found the time to make the Botong film.

He considers the documentary as the most exciting art form in Philippine cinema today. "Filmmakers like Carlos, Jay Alcala and Vincent Rivero, and others, maybe can create Botong doc," he said.

He wanted that the Ayala group allowed him to direct the doc precisely because of his roots background.

Most cinematic

"Botong is the most cinematic among Filipino painters," explained Gallaga, who had previously directed a doc on his ancestral home in Gueapo, "Baby Babay Botong."

Balikbayan footballers enjoy touring PH

By Robert San Diego Jr.

FOOTBALL players Armand del Rosario and Arnel Dela Cruz are not alone in their love for the national ball as the current generation of "The Striving Race Philippines."

Being rough and tumble guys, Armand and Arnel, his brother, race partner and fellow footballer, didn't mind getting a few bumps and bruises along the way.

Armand del Rosario known as a member of the Arhah Football team. The brothers are now with Raja Meralco Club of the United Football League. The UFL games are aired on TVI sports channel (ATV).

They consider their time on TVI's Team Prime Time show—a local version of the Emmy-winning reality program—as "amazing" adventure as well.

The spiky brinks, who were both based in San Francisco, USA, before moving to Manila, are a great case of the country for the rapidly show which promotes tourism. "We tried all modes of transportation—buses, boats, planes, jeeps, taxis, and cars," Armand recalled. They did mean all to provide episodes, sometimes even helicopter rides over Manila and boarded a luxury roller coaster in the middle of the city.

Armand del Rosario had gone to college at the La Salle University in Manila. He knew his way around. "When we were younger," he said, "we took motorbikes and jeeps when we considered it our private transportation. Bored and bored," Arnel added: "It's the way we make things all the time. Coming from a basketball background, we're used to the other physical and mental challenges. Arnel said, "It was pretty easy."

Advantages

"Basketball was one edge from the other side. We are athletes, and football," Armand revealed. "But though we grew up together, we are two distinct personalities." Arguments were unavoidable. "We were generally stayed out," said Arnel. "Plus, we're very competitive." Armand, who they developed on the football field, was another advantage.

"Our only weakness was the language," Armand revealed. "We can converse in FL,

ARMAND and Arnel del Rosario

English, but it was sometimes difficult to read the clues and their actions, which were not even Tagalog."

And they were uncomfortable for a month and couldn't ask help from family and friends. "We gradually disappeared from the face of the earth," said Arnel.

Toughest competitors

Among the rivals, they identified game builders Mark Delgado and Ken Tan, and showbiz jabs Jovi Linares and Bado Bado as their toughest competitors. Mark and Ken were "physically fit," said Arnel, and Jovi and Bado were "strong and smart."

One thing they noticed during the show's taping (from June to July) was that their strength was not enough to win the P2-million cash prize. Brains and muscles were crucial factors, said Arnel.

If they win the case, the brothers plan to replace or travel. "I'd take my wife to Europe," said Armand. Arnel would watch the World Cup to meet next year.

In the meantime, they are grateful that the show took them abroad throughout the country. "This program should be endorsed by the Department of Tourism," said Armand. Arnel agreed: "The show also proved to us that Filipinos are the bravest and kindest people in the world."

'Man in the Mirror' cowriter pens new tribute songs for MJ

LOS ANGELES—Michael Garret, who cowrote Michael Jackson's "Man in the Mirror" and sang "I Just Can't Stop Loving You," has composed and performed two new tribute songs to the King of Pop.

He recently met the Grammy winner and Oscar-nominated Swedish singer Maxi Jönas, at the Malibu-based fundraising dinner hosted by former film, Philippine International Film Festival, and Los Angeles Music Foundation.

In a later interview via e-mail, the multi-talented Swedish duo said that the last part of the song was new. "I just can't stop loving you," he said, "is a tribute to the late Michael. Below are excerpts from our interview with Jönas, who remembers Michael fondly for being highly creative, for being a perfectionist and for his childlike sense of humor.

"'Bang On Love' 'You' is your answer to your original duet with Michael Jackson. What thoughts and feelings did you have as you were composing and performing the new song?"

"When we were on stage performing the duet 'I Just Can't Stop Loving You,' it was like Michael was singing it to me. So, I wanted to write a response that would describe him. I felt closer to him, when a different way he wrote in my life, and how much I appreciated the opportunity to be around him."

Will there be other tribute to Michael Jackson fans in your coming new album?

In fact, yes. We recorded another song entitled "The Loveless," which pays homage to Michael and Anna Torrey.

Can you share your memories of meeting Jackson for the first time? And of the last time you saw him?

After Michael and Quincy Jones scripted "Man in the Mirror," Michael wanted to record it as a love song that was more romantic. For him, Quincy Jones called me to come to the studio to record the song. When I saw MJ, I remember him being really down-to-earth. It's like being the stars in the way he, Michael was holding a video camera recording my performance. When I asked him, he responded that he loved my voice and my energy and that he wanted to sing it with me. But I did.

As for the last time I saw him, I had reached out to him in 2000 when I learned he was making plans to go back on tour. I might up with him on the phone during the Michael Jackson week on "American Idol." One week before he died. He congratulated me on my Grammy win and Oscar nomination. I then saw him at his last public event weeks before he died.

What do you remember most about Jackson? What inspired you to write in your tribute to him?

Michael was incredibly creative, a perfectionist to the core, and on stage, we had a childlike sense of humor. While in the studio recording our duet "I Just Can't Stop Loving You,"

ONLY IN HOLLYWOOD
Alyssa V. Nepales

Michael reminded his past, but when it came to his singing, my voice, he began writing people in my life in an effort to make me more up. Quincy Jones, who wrote the lyrics to "I Just Can't Stop Loving You," he began to change me. He began to change Michael, who the other hand, was just cracking up.

Can you share the story that was the making of "Man in the Mirror"?

I was inspired by the story of one of his experiences. He called me to describe the type of song he needed to complete his "Man in the Mirror." I was not together with my main writing partner at the time, Glen Ballard, and so he began to search for words on his keyboard. I began to fly through my first words for a number of days. The song "Man in the Mirror" which I had written in the book "The Loveless" just popped out of me. I began writing on that theme, and the lyrics began to flow. Within 15 minutes, we had the first verse and the chorus of the song. We split up to work on our respective assignments. Glen the music and the melody and lyrics. Two days later, we completed the duet.

You cowrote the Oscar-nominated song, "Love Me, Love Me," which was sung by Jennifer Hudson. Can you tell us how you got involved?

I was brought in to "Dreamgirls" film project by the music supervisor Morgan Warner, to work with composer Beany Lauder. We wrote over 20 songs for consideration. Our assignment was to provide Quincy's character with another way to express his love for Jamie Foxx's character without her having to say it. It worked, and Jennifer was extremely convincing in the song as she was to the acting role itself. The song was not only Oscar-nominated, it also won a Grammy award.

We have collaborated and worked with, or sang background music for, other major artists and stars. What of those talents stand out to you most and why?

It all began with Quincy Jones because he introduced me to the world as a songwriter and a recording artist. He brought "Man in the Mirror" to MJ's attention, and suggested that I be the person to "I Just Can't Stop Loving You." Other artists for whom I have written or worked with include Madonna, Aretha Franklin, Ray Charles, Miles Davis, Elton John, Sergio Mendes, Jamie Foxx, Sarah Sargent, the Haggard, Phil Spector, Sheryl Crow, Chaka Khan, Natalie Cole, Robin Williams, Bruce Springsteen, the Gers, The Beach Boys, Stevie Nicks, Kenny Rogers, Willie Nelson, Willie Davis and Keith Richards.

What were your sources of inspiration when you wrote "I Just Can't Stop Loving You,"

SEEN Garret composed and sang "Bang on Love" and "The Loveless" for the King of Pop.

Late-night visitor haunts the workplace

By the Entertainment Staff

PRETTY Media's latest coffee was on between her and General Management. It's a common refrain from coffee. "We are just friends."

PAID CP's scandalous coffee was on between her and General Management. It's a common refrain from coffee. "We are just friends."

PI and her brother's coffee was on between her and General Management. It's a common refrain from coffee. "We are just friends."

Perhaps PI just picked up CI who was supposed to drink his black coffee? What better CP than it should be, too?

Dubious awards

Charles was a little too proud of winning a passionate award. Unlabeled to CI, people are calling their own.

Come to think of it, CI's mediocrity was caused by Instagram. CI presumably was a last-minute Powerball Bucks had pulled strings.

Reversal of fortune

Giggling Arise used to advise Hamilton. Now, moving his vibrant career. Arise's most recent is not so.

SA and DE were caught in a moment. SA believed he was a show in for a prestigious project that went to DE. Perhaps, SA spread a wordy message about DE.

Fun forward to the late and now: SA became more popular than DE, with a DE's help from influential friends.

Interestingly, it is thought to have caused between SA and DE.

Flip-flopping

Contrary to reports, there's no evidence that PI is concerned about being in Hugh's presence. It is because PI supports it's a democracy. No longer on top of the pecking order, SP feels that the job is a challenge there.

Perhaps SP should wake up at 6:00 and smell the flowers, so to speak. Other SP resources have been steadily shut out and/or are taking forever to be paid.

On perhaps the latest call, ignore the fact that SP is not the most successful performer in town and would be a liability.

Silver war

Major Star and Activated Silver are always the first to point out that there is no longer any competition between them.

Curiously, however, when AR launched a huge project, MS was a big event at the same time.

Every time, MS has something noteworthy in the works. MS would quickly claim and high-profile releases.

To top it off, MS is now joining

RUSHES

leave with people who are prepared to be at odds with AR's supporters.

Not so clear was, anyone?

S20 Mission

LOS ANGELES—Bredford Hills' special series "S20 Mission" is taking the publishers of US magazine life and style for $20 million over a cover claiming he had abandoned his daughter last, his lawyer said.

The weekly's July 10 issue updated the headline "S20 in town, abandoned by his dad," over a picture of the wedding 6-year-old, who has been with her mother. S20's lawyer says the shock divorce announcement was made.

Crutcher's lawyer Ben Fields called the magazine publisher "a man of honor," and said he had a "definitive" answer. Publishing in the US. S20's Court in Los Angeles, seeking damages of $20 million.

The latest news that the very inside the magazine does not reject the "abandonment" claim as out of the headlines.

The very magazine that, in the photo used on the cover, S20 was seen after being unable to take a puppy home from a pet store, was due to being abandoned by her father.
